Three-Cornered Race for Senate Stirs Up Georgia

Farmers of State Object to Interference of President

May Defeat His Man

Loyalty Issue Is the Main One Before the

ATLANTA, Aug. 31.—With the loyalty issue as the main feature of the trace, the hottest contest for the United States Senate ever waged in Georgia will be decided by the Democrats of the state at the polls on September 11. While there are five men in the race, it is admitted that only three have any chance. The other two will get votes in their own sections, and that will be about all.

The real race is among Senator Thomas W. Hardwick, Representative William Schley Howard, of the 5th District, and W. J. Harris, former chairman of the Federal Trades Commissed his one great mining for the Senate when he went to see the President on the matter of running for the Senate South Georgia.

The latter is probably his strongest hope. As a result of its provisions the man who gets the highest number of votes in any one county casts the vote of that county. In other words, county unit votes and not the majority vote of the state decide the race. Since the city counties in Georgia are practically on a par so far as votes go with the smaller counties, a man might lack a majority of the state and yet win. For instance, Fulton County, in which Atlanta is situated, has some 250,000 residents. And yet the man who carries this county would get only six votes, whereas some man who carries a county with, say, 10,000 residents would get two votes. Or three 10,000 counties would vote as much as one county with 250,000. If no one candidate gets a majority of the county wint vote, then a second primary will be ordered.

It is admitted that Hardwick is strong with the farmers. In Georgia they are great believers in state rights and think they are the final appeal on questions as to who shall represent them. They do not appreciate interference from the outside of any kind.

Howard's Record Is Good

It is admitted on every side that the day of the law guit the same the state explaining his rosition, declaring that he is not displayed or an obstructionist, but that he has acted strictly within his rights as a member of the Senate. In this dry time and state perhaps the most interesting sidelight on the race is the promise made by Cooper. "If I am efected, when my constituents come to Washington I will provide them with the best champagne and the finest wines to be had in the United States," he promises.

Says Lusitania Did

Not Rouse Americans

Howard's Record Is Good

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 31.—Professor Kuno Meyer, who was in America in May, 1915, when the liner Lusitania was sunk, describes in the Pan-German at the time. There has been considerable discussion of the law guit the split in the loyal vote and the port. In the meantime Hardwick is go be reëlected. This is due to two things | Hurley has been so lavish in his s they would support the President's choice in order to make it a clean-cut issue between some loyalist and Thomas W. Harris was the victim of several mistortunes. He came South a year or so ago and investigated the price of because of his record in the Senate.

Howard Regains Strength
Then there came the recoil, and How and began to regain some of his strength. Whether he has succeeded in full or not is hard to say.

It is plainly recognized here that Hardwick stands an excellent chance to the must be placed an extremely able organization and the hardest kind of the dailies, and not a single paper and the weeklies in Georgia and by most of the dailies, and not a single paper and the weekles in Georgia and by most of the dailies, and not a single paper as far as known has come out against lim editorially.

It has been charged that Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board made a contribution to the Harris calculation and the Hardwick of the Shipping Board made a contribution to the Harris calculation and shipping Board made a contribution to the Harris calculation and the hardwick and the price went up and was hard to get at that.
